

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A communication system includes a mobile station capable of transmitting a plurality of control channels. At least one of the control channels has pilot data placed separately at a plurality of positions within a transmission unit time to reduce the deterioration in reference phase detection performance in the reception of a base station, and to reduce the deterioration in the base station receiving performance.